Weather radar southern ontario canada

12345678910112131415 In October, Canada's weather is cool yet comfortable, meaning that most outdoor activities can be enjoyed without bundle up snow. The country is massive and the exact conditions vary depending on which area you visit, but ultimately you can expect a pleasant autumn day, agile nights and some precipitation. Overall, October is a great time to visit Canada because there are fewer crowds and shoulder season means you'll find some great deals on accommodation. After a series of events happening across the country to take advantage of the end of warm weather, this time of year is also best for spotting the bright colors of Canadian autumn foliage. In the northern provinces, the leaves will hit their peak colors in September or early October, but if you're staying near the U.S. border, the best time to visit is usually around mid-October. Depending on which of Canada's thirteen provinces you plan to visit, you are likely to find different weather and climates across the country. Most of the largest and most visited cities are near the southern border and coast, which means that october weather will be relatively temperate. However, if you're traveling north or in the interior of the country, the expected temperatures will be significantly lower. Medium low temp. Average rainfall in Vancouver 55 F (13 C) 46 F (8 C) 6.5 inches Toronto 56 F (13 C) 44 F (7 C) 2.0 inches Montreal 55 F (13 C) 42 F (6 C) 3.1 inches Halifax 56 F (13 C) F (7 C) 3.6 inches Calgary 50 F (10 C) 33 F (1 C) 0.4 inches Ottawa 55 F (13 C) 40 F (4 C) 2.8 inches Edmonton 51 F (11 C) 34 F (1 C) 0.4 inches Precipitation from east to west is expected, especially if you visit one of the rainy cities of British Columbia, such as Vancouver. Snow is unlikely to be in any major city in October, but if you're traveling to the northern provinces or during the last part of the month, it's possible. Clothes need to vary depending on what part of Canada you're visiting and whether you can travel in early October or towards the end. At the beginning of the month, it may still be warm enough to wear a short-sleeved shirt during the day, but at night you still want a warm jacket. Wherever you go, you'll probably have to bring a jacket, fleece, sweater, gloves, hat and long pants. The key to preparing for October in Canada is to pack clothes that can be easily layered on top of each other. So you can adapt to cooler and warmer temperatures and the weather changes throughout the day and night. Since rain is quite common, there is also some waterproof gear. A lightweight rainproof jacket and waterproof shoes can make a world of difference, but at least make sure you have a compact umbrella you can easily carry around. After October, the weather will quickly and drastically change across Canada as the days get colder, darker and more snowy. So it's not that Canadians make the most of their finals days in warm weather fun outdoor events across the country. Many events in 2020 have been scaled back or cancelled, so be sure to confirm the most up-to-date details on the official event website. Rocky Mountain Wine & Food Festival: One of the autumn highlights of Alberta, Rocky Mountain Wine & Food Festival celebrates the most delicious parts of this Canadian province. The festival happens over two weekends, first in Calgary and then in Edmonton, where there are lots of wine, beer, savory bites and sweet treats. Rocky Mountain Wine & Food Festival has been cancelled in 2020.Celtic Colors International Festival: Scenic Cape Breton Island in Nova Scotia, to celebrate Celtic heritage with the local at this exciting festival. The weekend is full of live performances, dancing, delicious food, and dramatic autumn foliage in the background. The 2020 Celtic Colours International Festival will be held virtually, so you can tune even if you can't make it all the way to Nova Scotia.Oktoberfest: The biggest Oktoberfest event in North America takes place every year in the city of Kitchener, about an hour outside Toronto. Locals put on a Bavarian festival, which rivals one in Munich, with traditional attire, hot pretzels and a seemingly endless amount of beer. The 2020 festival will be scaled back, virtual events are planned and intimate limited-capacity gatherings are planned. Nuit Blanche: Art lovers across the country head to Toronto for this 12-hour festival, which starts at sunset and continues until sunrise. It is considered one of the largest contemporary art exhibitions in North America, and it usually takes place throughout the city. In 2020, however, Nuit Blanche is scheduled to take place near digital events scheduled from 7p.m on October 3, 2020, and will go until 7:01 a.m.Montreal International Black Film Festival: Since 2005, this annual festival has showcased the best new cinema created by Black filmmakers, both established celebrities as well as up-and-coming stars. About 100 films premiere each year in Montreal this fall, accompanied by discussion panels and conversations cast around it all out. The 2020 festival films will be published online so that you can enjoy them from home and will take place from 23 to 4 September. As Canada's reputation as the main leaf peeping destination, autumn is a very popular time to visit. The most scenic locations are in the eastern part of the country, but you can see the autumn colors almost everywhere. The colors are starting to change a little earlier than they do in the U.S. Northeast, so be sure to take the time of your trip right. October is the main season of apple picking and orchards across Ontario and Quebec to open their farms for those who want to get out and collect their fruit. Every year on the second Monday in October, many companies are closed for Canada Thanksgiving in most provinces (the exception is Thank you for giving us a know! February is the coldest month in Canada, but the winter festivals and ski season -are still in full season. If you can brave a little chill, it's a great month to score discounts on accommodation and travel. There are many travel bargains at this time of year for visitors north, lower than average airfares and hotel rates. The temperature is cold, but when you're ready, you can enjoy the many activities and festivals that take place in February in Canada. Canada's weather may dramatically change from region to region, but overall February is one of the country's coldest months, with lows in many places averaging well below 32 degrees Fahrenheit (0 degrees Celsius). Calgary: 34 F (1 C)/10 F (-12 C) Edmonton: 26 F (-3 C)/8 F (-13 C)Toronto: 32 F (0 C)/19 F (-7 C)Whistler: 39 F (4 C)/25 F (-19 F)Whistler 4 C)Montreal: 26 F (-3 C)/12 C (-11 C)Vancouver: 46 F (8 C)/37 F (3 C)Banff: 32 F (0 C)/10 F (-12 C) Although the West Coast is a little warmer, it's also wet, an average of nearly 6 inches (150 mm) of rain spreads over 16 days. Meanwhile, the country's east coast is significantly colder, averaging 26 degrees Fahrenheit (-3 degrees Celsius) in Toronto. (Banff, in the middle of the country, usually averages a freezing of 17 degrees Fahrenheit (-8 degrees Celsius), compared to.) February's cold temperatures require clothes that can be easily layered, which is also important because although it's cold outside, shops, restaurants and other facilities can be quite warm inside. Long-sleeved shirts, including sweaters and sweatshirts. Heavy winter jacket, lighter jacket and winter vestHat, scarf and gloves or mittensSuled toe, comfortable waterproof shoes and bootsAn umbrella Despite freezing temperatures, Canada will host many events-indoors and outdoors-in February. Here are some of the most exciting: Nova Scotia Heritage Day: If Maritime has more of your own cup of tea, February is a great time to visit Nova Scotia. In addition to a wide range of winter sports, you can explore Nova Scotia Heritage Day on the third Monday in February. A day celebrating Nova Scotia's rich heritage, including the population of Mi'kmaq First Nations, was created and named by local schoolchildren. Hot Chocolate Festival: Vancouver's month-long annual charity charity event includes dozens of bakeries, ice cream and cafes and chocolatiers. A great way to keep warm with a delicious treat during one of Canada's coldest months, the Hot Chocolate Festival starts at the end of January and ends on Valentine's Day (February 14). Free skating at Robson Square: Vancouver hosts skaters at its downtown gathering throughout the winter months. He will continue at the end of February. Dine Out Vancouver Festival: Originally imagined as a way to drum up business during the slower tourist season in January and February, Dine Out Vancouver has become a must-visit for foodies in western Canada, featuring prix fixe menus from the best restaurants for almost three weeks of celebration. Toronto Light Festival: This relatively new art festival featuring light-themed art installations runs from late January to mid-March in the city's historic Distillery District. February is also the month when the winter culinary festival in Winterlicious, featuring hundreds of Toronto restaurants, begins. Qinhuai Lantern Festival: And to celebrate the Chinese Lunar New Year, Toronto will host this event in early February. The lantern festival is reminiscent of New Year's Eve events across China. Igloofest: The outdoor music festival began in 2007 to highlight local music. Igloofest takes place in the Old Port of Montreal, and regularly draws thousands of visitors over its three-week run. One of the highlights of Igloofest is the One Piece Suit competition, and no, it's not a swimsuit competition. Even Quebecois isn't baring it all at these temperatures. It's a snowsuit contest that can make nice prizes for participants (and is a much more climate-friendly option). Montreal Snow Festival: Fete des Neiges runs every weekend from mid-January to mid-February. It takes place at Parc Jean Drapeau, with activities for the whole family, including a playground of ice sculptures, an ice tournament, internal pipes, skating, sledding and snow shoe. There are live shows and food as well. MontreaLen Lumiere: Don't forget to check out the Montreal Festival of Lights, which starts in February and runs through mid-March. The three-week festival features games, music, art displays and entertainment for families, and a host of culinary events, including the Festival of Quebec Cheeses. Driving in Canada during the harsh winter months can be treacherous if you're not ready. Weather temperatures often involve a wind-hunting factor, which means it feels colder than what the thermometer actually reads because of the cold wind. For example, what you might hear a meteorologist say is: It's minus six, or minus 10 in the wind chill. Canadians know how to dress well in winter freezing temperatures. Follow your example by donning strong winter gear, including waterproof footwear and clothing. Two of Canada's best national parks, Jasper National Park and Banff National Park, are particularly picturesque in winter. You can skate in frozen Lake Louise or relax in Banff Hot Springs.
